SUBJECT: Mulon, Milon, Millon of Mobile

REPORT TO [Private]

BACKGROUND: Henry Joseph Millon married Marie Françoise Girardy, daughter of Joseph Girardy of Louisiana's German Coast, about June 1734.¹ Their marriage produced at least four children: Jacques, Jean, Maurice, and Henry. About November 1744, the widowed Françoise wed Joseph Des Ruisseau, Seigneur de Lisle Perro.² In 1764 her son Jacques Milon—as guardian of his minor brothers—settled their father's succession at New Orleans.³ Neither marriage nor the births of the four sons appear in the published abstracts of the New Orleans diocese (the only means by which those records are accessible), although civil marriage contracts are on file at New Orleans. Given the Girardy connection, the events may have occurred in the Mobile jurisdiction where Girardy lived and worked prior to his settlement on the German Coast.

OBJECTIVE: Search Mobile's colonial Catholic registers, pre-1760, for records relating to the Milons, Girardys, and their slaves or potential kinsmen.

PRIME RESOURCE: Parish of Our Lady, Mobile, Alabama
(Baptisms, 1704–1773; Burials, 1726–1768; Marriages, 1724–1786)
Photocopies of Mobile's registers were acquired in the 1970s from the Chancery Archives of Mobile with two restrictions: (1) The photocopies are to be used only for research purposes; and (2) abstracts can be made from individual records but I may not reproduce any pages or publish the whole.

BACKGROUND: Higginbotham, Jay. Old Mobile: Fort Louis de la Louisiane, 1702–1711. Mobile: Museum of the City of Mobile, 1977.

AUTHORIZATION: 8 hours for research, analysis, and reporting

KEY FINDINGS: Two Millon males of the same age bracket, and only two, appear in Mobile between 1734 and 1744: Pierre Étienne and Henry Joseph. Interactions between them, as well as their shared occupations, suggest the strong possibility that they were brothers. Henry Joseph Milon, called Joseph, gave his birthplace as Rheims, France. He is variously said to be a “master carpenter” and “entrepreneur of works for the king,” while Pierre was a “master joiner.” Joseph’s 1734 marriage into the influential Girardy family, and Pierre’s marriage into Mobile’s prominent Baudreau de Graveline and Simon dit LePointe families, likely aided Joseph’s rise in stature.

All sons of Joseph Millon and Françoise Girardy were baptized at Mobile, prior to the 1744 deaths of both Joseph and Pierre. Pierre’s widow, Jeanne Simon dit La Pointe, stayed in Mobile with her family and remarried there. Joseph’s widow returned to the New Orleans–German Coast area to be with her family. Her son Jacques makes two later appearances in Mobile’s registers: first, as a godparent (1756) and then at his own marriage (1760).

No slaves were baptized for either Millon family until 1740, and only a handful thereafter. None of those enslaved infants, their mothers, or godparents bore names that have been previously connected to the New Orleans–based Millon/Mulon family of color.

NEXT STEP: Very few civil records survive for colonial Mobile. The data found to date for this family strongly suggest that research should focus now on the civil records of New Orleans—principally the Notarial Archives, which have been microfilmed and may be studied through the local Family History Centers of the Salt Lake-based Family History Library.

GENERAL NOTE: Descriptive and ethnic terms are crucial “identifiers” when working with single-name and common-name slaves and f.p.c. Thus, throughout this report, individuals will be identified by the exact ethnic terms each record used to describe them.

RESEARCH NOTES

Jay Higginbotham’s definitive study of the first decade of Mobile’s settlement presents the arrival of Joseph Girardy in Mobile with Simon dit La Pointe, who would become a Milon father-in-law also. Higginbotham, after much discussion of the Canadian military officer and commercial entrepreneur Jean Baptiste Baudreau de Graveline, introduces Graveline’s brother Gabriel:

“On Feb. 14, 1708, at the office of royal notary Antoine Adhémar de Saint-Martin [in Montréal], Gabriel signed on Antoine Simon of Pointe-aux-Trembles to accompany him and his family to Mobile. Simon’s services would be obligated to Gabriel for a period of two years, during which time Gabriel would be responsible for all food and supplies. Five days later, Gabriel signed on five other young men—Étienne Étienne [sic], Laurent Blot, Jean-Baptiste L’Ecuyer, Joseph Girardy and Jacques Mainville—several of whom were related to him and all of whom were in their twenties. For a salary of 150 livres the engagés were, for a one-year period, to ‘do absolutely all that the said M. Graveline wishes them to do,’ to ‘work on the black lead of the Mississippi if he deems it profitable’ and ‘not to leave their services without written consent.’ With his six engagés Gabriel was now ready to depart, having already received permission from Governor Rigaud de Vaudreuil. There were to be further delays, however.”

After political opposition from the Detroit governor, Indian attacks on the upper Mississippi, unanticipated childbirths, and some ore sampling in the Illinois area, the party finally arrived at Mobile in January 1710. "Several of the engages whose terms were ended remained at Mobile, but [the others soon returned to Kaskaskia [Illinois] to extend the search for minerals." (Higginbotham, Old Mobile, 395–98, citing numerous original documents from the Archives Colonies (Paris) and Archives Judiciares (Montreal)).

Joseph Girardy and Antoine Simon dit La Pointe were among those who stayed in the Mobile district and settled among the Pascagoulas Indians of the Mississippi Coast. As previously known, Girardy's daughter, Françoise would marry Henry Joseph Milon. As the following Mobile church records show, Simon La Pointe's daughter Marie Jeanne married one Pierre Étienne Milon, Joseph's likely brother.

20 March 1744

Baptism of a négritte belonging to Mr. Boissi. The godparents, François Bodr____? and Marguerite Pro have given her the name Jeannete. Signed: F. Jean François; Marguerite Preaux.

COMMENT:

In 1788, a free man of color named Jeannot—possibly Jeannot Mulon dit LeBrun, suspected slave of Jean Bossier dit LeBrun who owned the farm next door to Joseph Girardy in St. John the Baptist Parish on Louisiana's German Coast—paid for the freedom of a negresse named Jeannette in St. John the Baptist Parish. (See Mills report, "Jeannot Mulon dit La Brun, f.m.c., Colonial Natchitoches, Louisiana," dated 8 December 2005, p. 25.)

There is nothing to suggest that these are one and the same Jeannette. However, because the nickname was not particularly common, I am noting the record here. "Mr. Boissi," the owner above, should not be confused with the Bossier dit LeBrun family. He was Bertrand Joseph de Boissy, an officer of the Marines detached to Mobile.

Burial Book 1: 42

Pierre Étienne Milon

16 November 1744

Burial in the parish cemetery of the corpse of deceased Pierre Milon, habitant, who died this day after having received the sacraments of the church. Signed: F. Jean François, Capucin Missionary.

Baptismal Book 1: 357

Louis Augustin Kreps

15 December 1750

Baptism of Louis Augustin, born yesterday of the legitimate marriage of Hugue Ernest Kreps and Marie Joseph La Pointe. The godfather has been Louis Augustin Rochan. The godmother, Marie Joseph Milon declares she does not know how to sign. Signed: F. Jean François, Capucin missionary; Louis Augustin Rochon.

Baptismal Book 1: n.p.

Antoinette LeBrun

4 July 1750

Baptism of Antoinette, born yesterday of the legitimate marriage of Claude Le Brun, soldier, and Marie Jeanne Requiem. The child had been baptized at home in danger of death. The godfather has been Jacque le Grand. The godmother, Toinette Uly, declares not knowing how to sign. Signed: J. LeGrand; Le Brun; F. Jean François, Capucin missionary.

COMMENT:

I am noting here the presence of this soldier named Le Brun at Mobile. However, I have seen nothing to suggest that he is in any way connected to the Bossier dit LeBrun family from which Jeannot Mulon of Natchitoches apparently took his own dit.

Baptismal Book 1: n.p.

Jacques, négrillon

22 September 1751

Baptism of Jacques, négrillon belonging to Mr. Kreps, habitant. Godparents: François Fievre and Marguerite Milon. Signed: F. Jean François, Capucin missionary; François; Marguerite.

Baptismal Book 1: n.p.

Jean Baptiste, Etienne, Claude, Roch & others

2 May 1752

Baptism of several nègre adults. The godparents have been Joseph Kreps and Louise Fieuvre; Pierre Kreps and Marthe Fieuvre, Jean Pierre Marbeaux and Marie Anne Millon; François Krebs and Marguerite de Flandre; Philippe Rousève and Marguerite Millon, François Noyan and Marie Jeanne Delande; Maurice Gabriel and Jeanne Boisdoré. Signed: F. Vomauld, Capucin.

Baptismal Book 1: n.p.

Joseph, négrillon

17 September 1753

Baptism of Joseph, born of the legitimate marriage of Pierre and Marie, slaves of Sieur Augustin Rochon. Godparents: Joseph Milon and Gabrielle Monteliemart. Signed: Joseph Millon; Gabriel Montelimart.

COMMENT:

This Joseph Milon should be a son of the Milon–Simon dit La Pointe marriage.
